Capsule Profile:

Brian Leiter (JD, PhD, Michigan) joined the University of Chicago faculty in 2008-09, where he is now the Karl N. Llewellyn Professor of Jurisprudence and the Founder and Director of the new Center for Law, Philosophy, and Human Values. From 1995 until joining the Chicago faculty, he taught law and philosophy at the University of Texas at Austin, where he was at the time the youngest chair-holder in the history of the Law School and also the founder and director of the University of Texas Law and Philosophy Program. He has also been a Visiting Professor at Yale University (Law), University College London (Philosophy), University of Paris X-Nanterre (Law), and Oxford University (Philosophy). He is the founding editor of Oxford Studies in the Philosophy of Law (with Leslie Green) and of the Routledge Philosophers book series; he was co-editor of the journal Legal Theory from 2000-2008. He is the author of four books— Nietzsche on Morality (Routledge, 2002; 2nd ed. 2015), the leading defense of reading Nietzsche as a philosophical naturalist; Naturalizing Jurisprudence: Essays on American Legal Realism and Naturalism in Legal Philosophy (Oxford University Press, 2007); Why Tolerate Religion? (Princeton University Press, 2013) and Moral Psychology with Nietzsche (Oxford University Press, 2019)—and editor of six others, including Objectivity in Law and Morals (Cambridge University Press, 2001), The Future for Philosophy (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 2004), and The Oxford Handbook of Continental Philosophy (Oxford University Press, 2007) (with Michael Rosen). His articles have appeared in Ethics, European Journal of Philosophy, Oxford Studies in Metaethics, Times Literary Supplement, Yale Law Journal, Oxford Journal of Legal Studies, Columbia Law Review, Stanford Law Review, Social Philosophy & Policy, Journal of the History of Philosophy, Philosophers' Imprint and elsewhere. His work has been translated into Spanish, French, Italian, Chinese, Russian, Portuguese, Hebrew, Polish, Slovak, and Greek. He has delivered named lectures at universities around the world, including recently the Paolo Bozzi Prize Lecture at the University of Turin in Italy, the Julius Stone Address in Jurisprudence at the University of Sydney and the Fresco Lectures in Jurisprudence at the University of Genoa. In the more popular media, he writes an occasional Academic Ethics column for the Chronicle of Higher Education. He has been voted “Professor of the Year” by his students and has consistently received student evaluations in roughly the top quartile of the faculty at both Texas and Chicago.

Personal: Born 1963; U.S. citizen; married with three children.
